When working or playing outdoors, be aware of overhead powerlines. You could come in contact with a wire and be electrocuted by carrying a ladder, working on the roof or trimming trees. Long-handled pool-cleaning, window-washing, and painting tools can also reach powerlines.

Tell kids to watch out for powerlines when climbing trees, flying kites, or playing with water blasters—and remind drone users to be careful, too.

We just want you to be safe.
